Artificial Intelligence Programme

The Oxford Artificial Intelligence Programme aims to provide you with a sound understanding of AI technology: its history, functionality, and capability, as well as the challenges that are inherent in its methods. The programme also offers you the insight to develop a comprehensive opinion about the possibilities that AI holds, and reflect on its limitations and ethical, legal, and societal implications. Through exposure to empirical research and real-life case studies, you will consider the potential presented by AI, and will be able to make an informed decision about implementing it in your organisation as you build a business case for its application.

Executive Finance Programme

To effectively drive a firm's success, business leaders and executives across functions require sound financial fluency. An understanding of finance is essential in decision-making, participating in financial discussions, and having comprehensive insight into how an organisation operates. The Oxford Executive Finance Programme is designed to build your proficiency in finance at an executive level by demystifying the nuances of financial practice and providing you with an overview of how firms make finance-driven decisions. Over six weeks, you'll develop the practical skills needed to value projects and measure the risk, return, and cost of capital. You'll access tools to help you navigate today's shifting financial landscape, through learnings infused with research from leading scholars and industry experts. You'll also explore the key topics that are changing financial practices, such as corporate governance, and environmental, social, and governance (ESG) factors. On completion of the programme, you'll have a confident understanding of executive finance, and the foundations to enable you to drive your organisation forward through informed decision-making.

Executive Leadership Programme

The Oxford Executive Leadership Programme enables you to develop your own authentic leadership style and gives you the practical insights, frameworks, and tools to help you lead teams effectively through a deeper understanding of your role and purpose as a leader. Over eight weeks, you'll explore core leadership themes, including: power and influence, motivation, authenticity and adaptability, change, complexity, and diversity. Combining theory and functional practice, this programme is centred around aligning your leadership purpose with the strategic focus of your organisation's mission. Develop the critical behaviours needed to lead high-performance teams in order to create value for your business.

Women's Leadership Development Programme

Only 2 per cent of S&P 500 CEOs are female,<sup>1</sup> however, reports highlight that having a greater number of women in management and senior leadership positions is linked to heightened performance across organisations.<sup>2</sup> Nevertheless, women encounter a number of barriers in the workplace, which can inhibit their career progress. The Oxford Women's Leadership Development Programme from Saïd Business School, University of Oxford offers you a space to critically examine, acknowledge, and develop your leadership style and skills within a community of like-minded professionals. Over the course of six weeks, you'll gain an understanding of the challenges female leaders face within the workplace and explore the unique strengths that will enable you to lead, negotiate, and influence others. Discover how to analyse and navigate cultural dimensions, and expand your mentorship capabilities in order to empower others to pursue leadership roles. ## Executive Strategy Programme

Working environments are becoming increasingly uncertain, and traditional approaches to organisational strategy are no longer sufficient. In a rapidly changing business landscape, strategy development needs to evolve to adopt a broader view of thinking. On the Oxford Executive Strategy Programme, you'll explore a contemporary approach to organisational strategy, drawing on active Oxford research that has guided the leadership of global organisations. Breadth, or thinking broadly within strategy, has become as critical as thinking long-term. With this underlying theme, you'll explore strategy techniques through the distinct framework based on extensive research from Oxford Saïd faculty, focusing on the four Ps of strategy:

- Purposes: The fundamental aspirations calling for action in an organisation
- Players: The key stakeholders who drive the successful delivery of a strategy
- Partnerships: The web of competitive and collaborative relationships that sustain a strategy
- Processes: The means by which strategies are made and delivered

This highly practical online programme enables you to engage with rich global case studies and culminates in the creation of a personalised strategy playbook to use within your organisation. You'll walk away prepared to grow your role and lead strategy in complex environments with this unique Oxford approach.

Leading Strategic Projects Programme

The dynamic nature of the modern business environment means that traditional project management metrics such as time, cost, and scope are no longer sufficient indicators of success. To create long-term sustainable value for organisations, a strategic approach and a shift towards project leadership is required. Strategic projects are those that have large-scale impact, requiring management that goes beyond the basics to help you adapt to unexpected change and contribute towards business objectives. The Oxford Leading Strategic Projects Programme teaches you to effectively combine business strategy, leadership skills, and project management techniques to help guide your team through modern-day complexity in order to prosper from new opportunities. Over the course of six weeks, you'll discover the benefits of strategic project leadership and equip yourself with the necessary tools to implement upfront planning to respond to potential business risks within today's volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous (VUCA) world.

Cybersecurity: Managing Risk in the Information Age

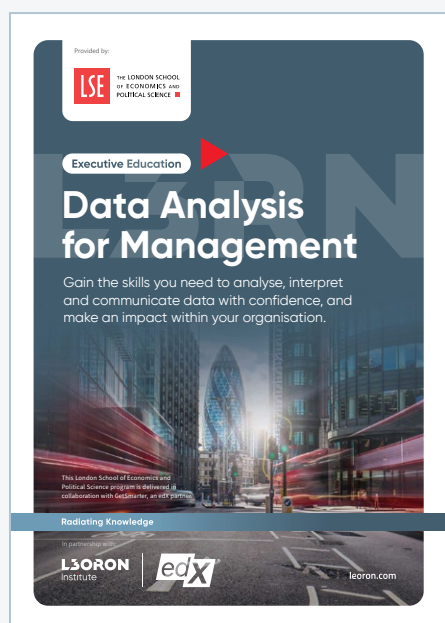

Cyberattacks and threats are no longer a case of if, but rather when. Cybercriminals can use phishing emails to gain passwords and credit card details, install malware that disrupts or destroys a computer network, or even use ransomware to hold information hostage. What can you do to protect your business? The Cybersecurity: Managing Risk in the Information Age online short course from Harvard's Office of the Vice Provost for Advances in Learning (VPAL), in association with HarvardX, offers an in-depth exploration of this complex landscape. This course will help you grow your ability to guard the integrity and confidentiality of your company's digital information. You'll learn how to identify and manage operational, litigation, and reputational risk. As you progress through the program, you'll gain the tools and confidence to conduct vulnerability assessments and locate weaknesses within your organization's networks, systems, and data, and develop strategies for responding to a cyberattack. Cybersecurity isn't an IT or tech department responsibility, it's an organization-wide imperative. That's why this cybersecurity course is aimed at business leaders and executives, as well as specialists in web security, security administration, or information security roles. The C-suite or senior management team will learn how to lead their organization in a time of rapidly increasing cyber risk. This program is also suitably in-depth for cybersecurity professionals – risk analysts, technology specialists, and information security professionals.

Digital Transformation in HR

Many human resource (HR) departments today have centralised systems that use outdated and inefficient approaches and software. In a continuously evolving business environment, HR plays a critical role in ensuring an organisation is equipped to digitise. Professionals in this space need to upskill and develop the ability to effectively utilise digital HR in order to succeed in their job and drive business performance. The Digital Transformation in HR online certificate course provides you with an in-depth overview of the key trends, issues, and methods involved in strategically implementing digital HR. Drawing on real-world case studies and recent research, you'll discover effective digital HR adoption strategies and develop the technological capabilities needed to enhance employee management and productivity. Guided by faculty from the Department of Management, ranked second in the world for business and management by the QS World University Rankings, you'll discover how to use data and technology to enhance the potential of your HR function and make more informed decisions. Finally, you'll learn how to create a digital human resource management (HRM) implementation plan and evaluate the emerging tools that assist with the digital transformation of HR practices at an organisational, functional, and individual level.

Data Analysis for Management

As the world becomes ever more data-driven, analytical skills are in high demand, but in very short supply. Organisations across the world are racing to gain a competitive edge by building their internal expertise to exploit quantitative techniques to their full potential. Guided by LSE experts, this eight-week online certificate course provides you with the theoretical knowledge and practical skills to increase your ability to understand, interpret, and communicate data relevant to your role and organisation. During the course, you'll develop an understanding of how data-driven models can inform managerial strategy and decision-making, learn how to extract business insights from data, and predict future trends. The course emphasises a hands-on approach to learning data skills through its introduction to Tableau, an industry-leading business intelligence and analytics software. Using Tableau, you'll have the opportunity to apply the tools and techniques you learn, and discover how it can be used to produce insights and high-impact data visualisations.

MBA Essentials

While an MBA trains you to see the business world differently, financial expertise and business acumen, although vital, are not enough to influence your organisation's leadership. These core skills must be paired with strong leadership techniques and an understanding of your strategic environment to be truly effective. The MBA Essentials online certificate course from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE) is designed to help you understand your strategic environment, master financial details, and drive business success by influencing colleagues and consumers. You'll be equipped with an essential MBA toolkit as you navigate the contemporary business environment, guided by esteemed LSE faculty. The LSE MBA Essentials online certificate course arms you with hard and soft business skills to maximise your competitive advantage and lead with influence.

Healthcare Leadership

Providing high-quality patient care and promoting population health and wellness is the ultimate purpose of any healthcare system, relying on a resilient network of medical workforces and caregivers. However, hierarchical leadership methods are no longer effective in today's volatile, uncertain, complex, and ambiguous (VUCA) world. Leaders need mindful, self-reflective, and adaptive approaches to leading teams to support those who shoulder society's critical medical functions. If you're looking to become an outstanding leader in the healthcare sector, consider enrolling in the Healthcare Leadership online program offered by the Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto. The program, which features faculty from the Institute of Health Policy, Management, and Evaluation at the Dalla Lana School of Public Health, will equip you with a practical toolkit to become an effective leader. Over six weeks online, you'll deepen your understanding of how emotional intelligence translates into leadership performance and organizational change. You'll improve your ability to lead with impact and influence while fostering high-functioning teams in a stressful and complex environment. Upon completing the program, you'll develop your own leadership development action plan based on your current context, ensuring your growth is not temporary but an ongoing part of your professional journey.

Accelerated Management Program

Effective management skills and knowledge are indispensable for leaders in today's dynamic business environment. The Accelerated Management Program, offered by Yale School of Management Executive Education, provides you with the essential tools and skills to manage your business more efficiently by addressing this need. This program features an integrated curriculum designed by a prestigious business school to help you overcome challenges and understand the interconnected elements of modern business.
